Meeting Recap February 2012

Thanks again to our February Sponsor, Alabama Graphics, as they allowed for Darren Draper of the Epstein Group to speak to us about the issues we are facing with the Commissioning requirements for projects as well as LEED Commissioning.

Last week, Stacy and I visited Washington DC to participate in AIA Grassroots 2012, we visited with the staff of our Senators and House of Representatives, and shared the four main issues affecting our practices that AIA has focused on for 2012.

On behalf of our members, we asked for Congress to Remove Barriers to Private Sector Lending, to improve the lending market and allow worthwhile projects to have access to capital.

Also, we asked for Congress to incentivize energy efficient new construction and renovations by expanding the Energy Efficient Commercial Building Tax Deduction, which would save energy and create jobs for Americans.

Third, we wanted to get support to ensure that small architecture firms, which comprises 95% of all firms, have access to SBA programs and the SBA size threshold for architectural small businesses is not categorized along with unrelated industries.

Finally, we asked for reform of transportation programs to maintain current funding, support all modes of transportation, and recognize the need for well designed projects.
